Agricultural Museum of Piedmont The Agricultural Museum of Piedmont (), located on Via IV Novembre, is the oldest and largest agricultural museum in Italy. It is devoted to the history of agriculture and has a large collection of historical artifacts and agricultural machinery, ranging from medieval to modern times. It is affiliated to both the Italian National Research Council and the University of Turin. History The museum was inaugurated in 1952 after twenty years of excavation work in the area of Bellinzona, in the northern part of the province of Turin. It was created under the directorship of Otto Giordani. The museum was opened to the public in 1954, and after the death of Giordani in 1958, it was headed by his son, Gian Giordani. In 1960, under the direction of Ottavio Benti, its name was officially changed to the "Museo delle Occupazioni Agricole della Piana". The museum is located in the historic city of Porta Sopra (Olevano sul Lago), in the vicinity of the castle of Chieri and the medieval castrum of Torrese. It is housed in a neoclassical style, Palazzo Ricci, which has been restored and is the residence of the museum. The property was purchased in 1934 for an exhibition center, having previously been a prison. The building housed the National Institute of
