The origin of the vertebrate limb and the proximodistal expression of Wnt-4 in the limb bud are conserved between chick and mouse. The Shh-Wnt-4-Aldh1a2 signalling cascade is essential for initiating the formation of the vertebrate limb. In the chick limb, the proximodistal expression of Wnt-4 is similar to that of Aldh1a2 in the underlying mesenchyme, a finding that is intriguing given the recent identification of a Wnt-4 repressor (Celf) in the chick limb mesenchyme. Celf is the closest mammalian homologue of the chick Wnt4 repressor Frzb, which is widely expressed in the hindbrain and spinal cord. To determine the functional relationship of these proteins, we have examined Wnt-4 expression in the mouse limb. Wnt-4 is expressed in the developing limb bud at E9.5 during the initiation of digit patterning, but is soon restricted to the posterodistal region. The expression pattern of Wnt-4 is remarkably similar to that of Aldh1a2 in the mouse limb, and mimics the expression pattern of Celf in the chick limb. Furthermore, we demonstrate that mice
