NativeJ is a powerful and easy-to-use Java exe maker. To create a new Java executable: Start the program and click the "Create a new Java EXE" button. NativeJ will ask you for a project name and open the project dialog. Navigate to the "Select a Target Directory" tab and click OK. NativeJ will search for any Java classes used by your project and copy them to the new project folder. Now, change the project properties and run the "Build Java EXE" button to build your project. Final Thoughts: Is this a Java exe maker? Yes, it is, and it's very easy to use. The only potential drawback is that you will have to create a new project every time you need to create a new executable, which can be annoying. Get More Info Before You Buy!
