Moscow, April 2, 2017 Interfax, the official news agency of the Russian church, reported yesterday that Pope Francis has again shown a preference for St. Tikhon of Moscow. During his visit to St. Petersburg on April 12, 2017, Holy Father Francis held an extensive private meeting with Metropolitan Nikodim of St. Petersburg. Fr Vladimir Shchegodsky, a Franciscan on duty at the event, disclosed that the Holy Father had “pondered the situation and ways of re-establishing relations with the Russian Orthodox Church,” in a conversation with the metropolitan. Shchegodsky reportedly noted that this was “not the first time” the Holy Father had requested a private meeting with Nikodim and the Russian hierarchy. Pope Francis made this request in February this year. According to the same source, the Holy Father showed a “fatherly concern” for the Russian people during a private meeting with Nikodim, and urged him not to allow the “name of Russia to be sullied” by the “scandals that have recently arisen in the Church.” The source also asserted that the Holy Father had expressed his “sorrow over the failures of the Church in Russia,” and had reiterated “the need to preserve the historic patrimony of the Russian Church,” in his
