Fallow is a pixel-art puzzle game, with an atmospheric and surreal story. Play as Isabelline, a young girl, and her dreams unravel as you follow her across the stories of her family. There are many puzzles to solve and secrets to discover, all revealed through the use of Isabelline's dreams. • 45 levels across 3 different worlds and a hub world. • 3 different modes of play – narrative, puzzle, and endless mode. • An original soundtrack by J.H. Williams III. • Numerous hand-drawn, original pixel-art backgrounds and hand-painted dream sequences. • Sparse pixel art, minimal game design, and a surreal atmosphere. • Player's choices shape the story as the game unfolds. • No loading between levels. • No in-app purchases. • Purchase once, play everywhere. Developer Notes The pixel art of Fallow is minimalist but rich in detail. The visuals are intentionally muted to create an ambient and sometimes surreal atmosphere. Although the game is for everyone, it's definitely intended for more experienced gamers looking for a challenging puzzle game. Support me on Patreon today! In a world ravaged by Dragons, Elves and Demons, Humanity is ruled by a group of elite Dragonborn. They seek to bring Dragons back into a world of sanity. Driven by threats that will soon be unleashed on the world, the Dragonborn and their allies must work together in order to stop the destruction of the Human race. The fate of the entire world lies in their hands. Features Diversity: Fantasy Grounds has a fantastic array of creatures to choose from when creating your Dragonborn army. From the original creatures like the ouroban converted by James Holloway, Dracoplasm Demon and Dragonborn of the Everfall to the existing creatures like the Volcanic Shifting Salamander and Nightwalker have all been carefully converted into Fantasy Grounds and easy to use tokens. Add to that the new creatures that show up in Kobold Press Creature Codex. Detailed Creature Development: Kobold Press has worked hard to bring some real life detail to Fantasy Grounds. Each creature has been given a unique mechanic and status. For example, you may see a Dokkumerino in the game. This is based on the player in the game running a dokkum. The dokkum card is placed face up on the game table as the creature is created and the statistics are applied to them. The Dokkumerino has a Dazzling Roar action ability which grants the creature the bonus ability to surprise and stun an enemy. As the creature improves its status in the game it will evolve and gain powers. The creature goes from being a Dokkumerino to a Dokkumlord. Player Creativity: Fantasy Grounds allows players to run their games in a way that will allow them to create a fun game for their players. The mechanics in the game allow players to come up with their own rules, abilities and mechanics. Players can have fun by creating crazy rules, like a Dragonborn with the ability to create a 40 foot long Mephid Fireball. This allows players to choose new rules for their game. Easy to play: Fantasy Grounds is easy to learn and play. If you have even the slightest grasp on the rules, you can start playing right away. Unforgiving: Real life races live at the mercy of those they oppose. Fantasy games are not different. If the other player gets too powerful, they will defeat your character. This creates a good level of challenge for both players. Wide Variety: There are a ton of Fantasy Grounds products. Including the new Kobold c9d1549cdd

Battle Royale's popularity has spawned a few spin-off games, however, the majority of these games have tried to preserve the core experience of the Battle Royale genre, rather than re-inventing the wheel. Battle Royale Training is one of the few Battle Royale games that has ripped out the core experience, turned it upside down and made it a great action game, with decent graphics. While a few parts of the game have been adapted from other Battle Royale games, like boosting up your stats and buying special gear, the core Battle Royale game is the same as it was in the original game. The basics are here: you are dropped on a large island where the only thing you can do is survive as long as possible. The game starts on a random server, but lets you create your own server. Luckily the servers aren't that big, so you can join any server quickly. When you start your server, the first thing you need to do is equip your gun (you can buy guns online) and set up your gameplay preferences. There are two modes, called "Bullet-Drop" and "Free Fire". The Bullet-Drop mode simulates a real-life environment. The bullet-drop takes effect, as if the bullet was shot in real life. This means that the longer the distance you shot, the less damage you do to your target. The Free-Fire mode is the standard Battle Royale mode. Here you have no gun-falloff, so you can fire at enemies at any distance. However, as mentioned before, the bullet-drop does not affect the Free-Fire mode, making it slightly easier to hit your targets. The other two modes are probably the most interesting ones: The Hunter mode is a sniper mode. You want to get headshots to win, and snipers are the best at that. But to get the best possible headshots, you need to

What's new:

, "The Moon of Zarzamora" Curious Expedition 2 Soundtrack, "The Moon of Zarzamora" We have a soundtrack yet to post for the recently released game Curious Expedition 2! Rob can explain it as you listen. Matt speaks on the choice of original soundtrack for the adventure. Steam preview warning(I'm finding out that you can hide this screen) and the other relevant information that you care about is posted below. The Curious Expedition 2 soundtrack is composed by AmbientWorld composer Steve Moll. The soundtrack consists of 20 new Kontakt instruments and a bonus track listing over a dozen other AmbientWorld soundsets in just one song. Three locations in the game and three unique soundscapes. If you decided to pick up this soundtrack you are guaranteed a quality product, solid clarity, and uncompromised sound design throughout this album. This is Ambient world music. This is not where a standard pop song would be placed. We have not used any effects other than a small amount of reverb, and maybe a limiter or dynamic range compressor. The natural ambient environment that we have captured in space has become an instrument for your in-game environment. In other words, a dramatised space. We believe that ambient space, alone can be amazing. We chose to create 3 locations. A low orbit facility, a space walk in zero G, and an exploration site on the surface of the moon of Zarzamora. Each location is unique in it's own right. We enjoy creating very different feelings, emotions, and scenes with each of the different locations. We wanted to give the player as a choice. We wanted the player to have their own journey, their own sound experience, and we wanted the player to be actively engaged with each of the locations. We believe that you as a player should be an important part of this action adventure. Even at the earliest programming stages we wanted to have the player walk around in any of the 3 environments, and have the music and sound of that location be part of the journey that the player takes. We are huge fans of the Ambient world soundtrack scene. We feel it is one of the strongest scenes in the world of sound. We respect and pay homage to the great music that they have created, and hope that they will feel that we have reciprocated in using their work in our sound design. It is a great scene that challenges us creatively

My biggest problem with the game is that the main character is not that sharp. Overall, I loved the game, but I think it can do with a sharper main character
