I've upgraded to the newest version available to fix some of the bugs I had previously found, but it still has problems. The main problem I've found is that ProxyBear keeps using old proxy settings when you change them in the Control Panel (Windows → Network & Internet → LAN Settings). When I manually change the proxy settings in Network and Internet, it works, but it is still using the old proxy settings when I start ProxyBear. Someone else complained about this on the GitHub support page under the description of the issue #7 which I'll link to at the bottom of this post, but it doesn't mention or solve the issue. Also, you can't make ProxyBear the default browser. Even if you change it there, when you restart the computer, it's back to Explorer. I searched the forum archives for people having the same issues and didn't find any. Someone else complained about the same issue on the GitHub support page, but there is no response there yet. I also find that Google Maps is super slow and jumps around a lot. I'm using Google Chrome Version 46.0.24

If you are using Tor to route your traffic through an onion router, then it is recommended to use the free version of Tor to be able to search for the Onion services. This means that even when you use Tor you still get a good connection. How to check if you are using a proxy server For me this is very important to know as it can really make your browsing experience so much better. You can turn off the privacy of your connection from your browser (add it to the privacy settings). For example in Chrome go to settings, advanced, network, and click on settings, and uncheck "Use a proxy server for your LAN". Then, while browsing, open the URL that was blocked and it should take you right back to the page you were on. You can check for proxies in the same way if you use Firefox. If you are using some kind of VPN (Virtual Private Network), this is important to know too. Try to disable the VPN before searching for the Onion services.
