WASHINGTON -- The Supreme Court on Wednesday struck down a Mississippi law that made it illegal to display a "For Sale" sign in front of one's house. The court's 5-4 decision, which involved a real estate agent living in the town of Natchez, Miss., is a critical victory for free speech and a setback for those who argue that residential real estate signs should be subject to regulations and restrictions. In the majority opinion, Justice Clarence Thomas said the law was unconstitutional because it "burden[ed] real estate licensees' constitutional rights." He said the Constitution "does not permit States to license one set of commercial speech ideas but not others." The lawsuit, which was brought by the real estate agent Russell Hopson, was decided on a 5-4 vote, with the four conservative justices dissenting. Chief Justice John Roberts wrote the dissenting opinion. Justice Samuel Alito also wrote a dissent. Last year, the Supreme Court decided in favor of a real estate broker who was suspended from the Florida real estate board after he put up "For Sale" signs on his home and yard. The court, in an unusual move, ordered the suspension lifted because the board did not show that it was a non-discriminatory policy. if you're looking to pull that off. I also noticed your CMK's are setup to run a porthole only configuration. You probably don't want to run the portholes through the top slot. Much too hard on them. I did this so my CMK's could just run the PMP's up through the footstep and my personal CMK's through the side, but it may be worth your time to try a two slot configuration first. -I would suggest changing the top slot to be 2.5" wide and make sure it has a porthole. This should allow the total length of the CM
