Everywhere Boots Collab - Storm Damage A quite familiar and simple search on google for 'everywhere boots collab' produced the following result: This is where we can see where all this belongs. For those of you unfamiliar with these boots, they are not made for rough terrain, they are intended for parking or pavement. If your feet have rough terrain then I suggest the Baekeland. No, what these boots do is scream 'I am not comfy'. Literally. The soles are not made to hug you, or to stand up to the rigors of climbing mountain trails, mud or even particularly rough pavement. All in all, this is an uncomfortable boot. Hence the name in their slogan: 'where every foot thinks, "I'm not comfy!"'. I therefore like to call this shoe the "Pavement Pedaler" or PP, since I suspect all these boots have both surfaced somewhere. (Yes, I am generalising here.) This is why they make their logo different from what we call a normal logo. They are all united by a small baguette, which in this case symbolises a foot: how not comfortable! I do own several pairs of these boots, including the original version, which has a smooth leather sole. These I wear sometimes when I can't find something suitable for hiking in. Although I haven't
