Peptides bound on the cell surface can trigger a number of events, including inhibition of cell-cell adhesion and induction of cell death. These responses are usually due to direct interaction with specific receptors on the cell surface, or receptors coupled to downstream cellular responses. In certain cases, peptides can bind directly to proteins on the cell surface, eliciting a cellular response without any requirement for an extracellular receptor. Here we summarize recent examples of extracellular peptide receptors as identified in the following three categories: receptors that are typically membrane-bound, unique receptor-like proteins that do not require a membrane to function, and receptors that are typically membrane-bound but that have function that is coupled to the cytoplasm.Q: docker-compose in dockerfile I have a dockerfile in which I want to run a container from a docker-compose.yml file.
